The BMM Bigger Weekend 2012

MISSION IMPOSSIBLE?

Dean Thorpe is BMM's President, a speaker, presenter, and business owner

Last year BMM's Bigger Weekend challenged us to take 'one small step' in our church, in our town, in our community and in ourselves. During the weekend itself we took one small step of challenging those present during the weekend and not yet members to sign up and this resulted in 6 new members. Members committed to going back to their churches and looking for ways to develop men's ministry with a wider vision of creating or re-launching BMM's regional areas. This tied in with our longer term strategy of having more regular meetings of members throughout the country and during the year as well as the 'Bigger' events. We also took the small step of commissioning Tony Aylward as our volunteer worker!

This year we're looking to build on the small steps that have been taken and begin to recognise the tremendous opportunity (and challenge!) we have to reach men in the UK today. This is our mission, it's the reason that the Baptist Men's Movement was created and the reason that it still exists today. For some the mission might seem impossible hence the title of this year's Bigger Weekend. Is our Mission truly Impossible in 21st Century Britain?

During the weekend we'll consider this question and break down our mission, explore what it means to us and what we can do to take the movement forward together as we continue in our mission to reach men with the Good News of Jesus.

We're assembling a fantastic line-up of speakers, including testimonies of real life experiences where their own personal mission at one time seemed impossible. All of whom will provide fresh inspiration, excitement and empowerment to believe that our mission can be made possible. For centuries man has met and conquered amazing challenges, those that at first thought seemed impossible to even contemplate let alone achieve. By choosing to attend the Bigger Weekend you can be part of it - complete the booking form and send it off today!
